From Drexel University to George Mason University Concert Hall, BMDC announces Season 23.

September 13, 2018, Arlington, VA - Bowen McCauley Dance Company (BMDC) announces its 23rd Performance Season Schedule. The company is back in rehearsal preparing for a fabulous season that includes new commissions, venues, and music collaborations. Season 23 brings an exciting new chapter for the Company and we look forward to sharing it with our friends, supporters, and new audiences.

Here's just a sampling of what lies ahead. We have been invited by Drexel University to choreograph a new commission that examines the intersection between dance and engineering mechanics. Founding Artistic Director and Choreographer, Lucy Bowen McCauley will collaborate with composer Jordan Key, a music PhD from the University of Florida. The resulting piece will premiere December 8 & 9 at Dance Place.

BMDC in its first-ever collaboration with the Fairfax Symphony Orchestra will premiere three new works by Lucy Bowen McCauley. The Company will perform at George Mason University's Center for the Arts Concert Hall in Fairfax, VA on March 9, 2019.
